CALEO!

Calypso POV:

I was happy. It had been six years since me and Leo had ridden Festus away from that prison I used to call home and never had any regrets. Now here she was sitting getting ready to open the repair shop her and Leo had set up in New York. It was called 'Leo and calypsos auto repair and mechanical monsters'. He had put every other machine shop out of business in the entire island of Manhattan. There he was that little grease monkey who stole her heart. He was only 21 but had left college early getting 3 degrees. She'd been renowned as a cook on live, what it was they called itâ€! Television?

They'd been married three years ago, it had been beautiful. Chiron, at Leos request allowed the wedding to take place in Camp half-blood. They put it up in the strawberry fields. The Aphrodite girls made her feel nervous. They ran around trying on dresses, fixing ornaments saying how perfect it would be. The Apollo kids sang as a choir while Apollo himself played his renowned 'Valdezinator'. As her father was Atlas and he was too busy holding up the sky Zeus offered to walk her down the aisle, she happily obliged. The three muses held the bridal train, while a little Aphrodite girl trickled rose petals on the floor. As she walked up the aisle she saw him wearing black suit and a bowtie which she thought looked cute on him. Jason, his best man stood next to him trying to scratch an itch on the back of his neck. "Hey sunshine," he said softly. She couldn't do much but smile at him. The ceremony was beautiful when Chiron said "Will you Leo Valdez take Calypso as your lawfully wedded wife?" Leo said "Uh-duh!" under his breath then said more officially "I do."
